

MOTHER WAITING FOR LONG-LOST CHILD RECEIVES BLOW BY WIRE.

Mary.

Miss Nathan.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan.

Father of Girl Kidnapped Twelve Years Ago Telegraphs to Anxious Wife Not to Depend Too Much on Stories, as He Is Not Sure of Identity.

With joyous expectancy Mrs. Michael Nathan was awaiting the homecoming of her daughter Mary, who was stolen twelve years ago when the mother's spirits were broken by the receipt of this telegram from her husband, who had gone to Chicago to bring back their long lost daughter:

"DON'T BELIEVE ALL THE STORIES YOU HEAR. I AM NOT YET SATISFIED."

There had been every reason to suppose that the young woman was the daughter of Mrs. Nathan, who twelve years ago was stolen, when she was a mere tot of three and a half years.

Then the Nathans lived in Hoboken. The police of a dozen cities became absorbed in the search for little Mary, but she had disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed her. The police said she had wandered to the marshes and had been drowned.

Only the mother had faith that her little one was alive, and the hope she cherished seemed about to be rewarded when the telegram came to crush her spirits.

Still the mother has hopes. She will not believe that the fair girl in Chicago, who knows not the history of her own early life, is not the child of twelve years ago who was stolen from the little home in Hoboken.

Will Not Give Up Hope. Until all doubt is cleared Mrs. Nathan declares she will continue to believe that her lost child has at last been found. She has reason for hope, for when the first intimation came from the West that Mary was found Mr. and Mrs. Nathan immediately telegraphed for a description of the young woman.

There was a scar over the baby's right eye when it was stolen and a birthmark which the parents described. The answer came back that there was a scar and a birthmark as indicated, and with the receipt of this reassuring information Mr. Nathan proceeded at once to Chicago.

It is evident from his telegram today, Mrs. Nathan says, that her husband is still in doubt, but that he has not given up all hope of finally identifying the young woman as his daughter. The delirium of a conscience-stricken woman may be responsible for the solution of this remarkable kidnapping mystery of twelve years ago. A Mrs. Green, with whom the young woman lived, and whom she supposed was her mother, died at No. 24 York street, Aurora, Ill., two weeks ago.

Confessed on Death Bed. On her dying bed Mrs. Green confessed in a young man named Nathaniel Bloom, a carpet dealer, that he supposed daughter was not her child. The falling woman became delirious and frequently repeated the name of Mary Nathan and mentioned something about Hoboken.

Young Bloom, who himself had lived with his parents in Hoboken when a boy, told his mother of what he had heard. Mrs. Green had also stated in a rambling way that Mary was not a Christian child, but one of his own birth and persuasion. Mrs. Bloom, the mother of young Bloom, recalled the twelve-year-old story of the kidnapping of little Mary Nathan, and divining that Mary Green was no other than the kidnapped girl, communicated with Mr. and Mrs. Nathan at their home, No. 25 Jefferson street, this city.

Mary herself was questioned. She could tell nothing of her early life. It was all a mystery to her. Young Bloom, who had been courting Mary, made her his wife after the death of Mrs. Green.

INVESTIGATION IN HOBOKEN BY AN EVENING WORLD REPORTER NOW REVEALS THE FACT THAT THERE LIVED NEAR THE NATHANS WHEN THEY WERE RESIDENTS OF HOBOKEN A WOMAN NAMED GREEN. SHE WAS HOUSEKEEPER TO A MAN

House From Which The Child Disappeared

WHOSE NAME SHE ADOPTED.

Disappeared at Same Time. Mrs. Green was not in favor with her neighbors. The man Green, whom some persons supposed to be her husband, kept a small clothing store on First street, near Jefferson.

SHORTLY PRIOR TO THE DISAPPEARANCE OF LITTLE MARY THE GREEN WOMAN WENT AWAY. SHE AND THE MAN GREEN HAD QUARRELLED. IN THE SUBSEQUENT SEARCH FOR THE STOLEN CHILD AN EFFORT WAS MADE TO TRACE MRS. GREEN. SHE WAS FOLLOWED TO BROOKLYN, BUT THE DETECTIVES GOT NO FURTHER TRACE OF THE WOMAN.

Mrs. Green's supposed husband afterward married into a Brooklyn family, a member of which is in the pawn-broking business on Court street, that borough.

Furniture dealer J. Harris, of No. 245 Court street, Brooklyn, said today that his sister was the wife of a man named George Green, who lived at No. 14 Troy avenue, Brooklyn, and is employed as a conductor on the Mary Avenue line of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's road.

CITY'S FORCE TORE UP CAR TRACKS.

Brooklyn Heights Railroad Has Found President Swanson a Man of Action on Humboldt Street.

A force of men from the Department of Highways tore up the tracks of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad on Humboldt street, between Meeker avenue and Grand street, today. Rails, trolley poles and wire were heaped up in the gutter for a space of eleven blocks. Tomorrow the Department will send men to restore the street to its original condition and send the bill to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

Three years ago the Brooklyn Heights Railroad asked a permit to shorten its route by making a connection between Meeker avenue and Grand street, promising in return for the favor to abandon its right of way on Humboldt street and remove the tracks, poles and wires. The permission was granted, but the company failed to live up to its agreement, and paid no attention to Borough President Swanson's notification. Today's action was taken on advice of the Corporation Council.

HURT BOARDING A CAR. A man about thirty-one years old, of medium height and build, with dark hair and ruddy complexion, fell while attempting to board a Second avenue car at Eighty-eighth street today, and sustained a severe abrasion of the forehead. He was picked up unconscious and was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital in an ambulance. He was not identified.

BABY LIONESS DEAD IN CAGE.

Nettie, Who Suffered Much Affliction in Her One Year of Life, Probably Fell from Tree Stump She Climbed.

Nettie, one of the lion cubs in Central Park, is dead after a series of afflictions crowded into her one year of life. She ago appeared stretched out at the foot of a stump of tree in her cage today with blood running from her right ear. It is supposed that Nettie climbed the stump and fell backward, striking on her head.

Nettie had been unfortunate from her birth. Her twelve months of existence had been full of aches and pains, accidents and surgical operations. On the other hand, twin brother George was as healthy as his sister was sickly. Both cubs were huge favorites with the children, who would stand at the bars of their cage for hours, watching them play.

Her first mishap was the fall from an eight-inch partition that divided the cage. Always sickly, this jarred her badly.

Seven-Foot Obstruction Is Placed Between Tracks and Motorman Sees It Just in Time to Save 100 Passengers

It is the belief of the Brooklyn police that a dastardly attempt was made last night to wreck a passenger train of the Sixth Avenue division of the Fifth Avenue Elevated Railroad.

An electric train rushing past Sixty-third street and New Utrecht avenue, at 11 o'clock last night, was stopped just in time to prevent being derailed by a seven-foot high obstruction which had been placed between the tracks.

The motorman, John B. Marshall, found that some miscreants had placed a seven-foot section of the trunk of a tree, standing upright in a barrel, in such a manner that the train must have struck the dastardly obstacle.

There were fully a hundred passengers in the train. The police are investigating.

STABBED WITH SHEARS. Assault of Lower East Side Man Escaped After Fight.

During an altercation today at No. 283 Madison street, David Schonbrod, thirty-one years old, of No. 62 Cannon street, was stabbed in the left side with a pair of shears by Max Epstein, of No. 159 Monroe street.

He was attended by Dr. Wernstein, of No. 294 Madison street, and went home. Epstein escaped.

PRISONERS PROFIT BY WATER IN CELLS

Magistrate Suspends Sentences Because There Is No Place to Keep Offenders Who Are Held.

Brooklyn Magistrate Naumer held court today in his Myrtle avenue tribunal today. Overflowing sewers had rendered the cells unfit for use, and men and women prisoners were crowded in the court-room.

Water to the depth of several feet had inundated the cells and the court officers had a trying time rescuing the prisoners. The rescuers were required to wade into the filthy water and carry the prisoners out on their shoulders.

Ten days ago there was a similar condition of affairs and although notice was sent to Commissioner Holme, nothing was done to prevent a recurrence of the trouble.

During the excitement attending the hurried transfer of the prisoners to-day Lillian Karas became hysterical and was carried, struggling, into the court-room. In the hubbub which followed several of the prisoners attempted to escape.

Magistrate Naumer suspended sentences in most of the cases brought before him. He did so because of the condition of the cells and the lack of immediate facilities for caring for the prisoners.

FOUGHT IN THE PARK. Trio in Row at McGowan's Pass Tavern Got in Court.

Frederic Freeman, of the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, and John and Fred Doll, of No. 321 East One Hundred and Eighteenth street, were arraigned before Magistrate Meade in Harlem Court today for creating a disturbance last night at McGowan's Pass Tavern in Central Park.

Balthasar Bongesser, a waiter, said that the trio spent an hour at the tavern last evening and proceeded to walk away without settling. When he asked for the money, Freeman, he said, hit him. Other waiters came to his rescue and the Dolls took a hand. Policeman Smith got into the mix-up and arrested the trio.

The Dolls were fined $5 each and Freeman bound over in $300 for Special Sessions on a charge of assault.
